2020 Corton-Charlemagne GC

Louis Latour is the largest landowner of Charlemagne with 10.5 hectares, and all but a 0.5 hectare are together. This has lovely precision and lightness with pure green pear and honeydew melon accented by honey, vanilla bean and shortbread. The dense palate edges on hedonistic - in a good way, then the lively acidity and a thread of chalky minerality kick in to give the wine an easy drinkability. 2024-38

2020 Bâtard-Montrachet GC Clos Poirier

This Bâtard cuvée has been isolated since 2019. It's a true clos in the heart of the appellation and just below Montrachet that Latour has been working with for 30 years. Unusually, the rows are planted north-south, or against the slope. Like with all Latour Grand Crus, this sees 100% new oak. It is a grand, ornate style of Bâtard with an almost thick fruit density nicely contrasted by its mealy texture. Its palate glows with peach peels, spiced apples, acacia honey and fluffy pancakes. Good lift brightens the long finish. 2023-33

2020 Château Corton Grancey GC

Showing blackberries and plums with underbrush and strong minerality, this is a Corton with a lot of personality. The tannins are nicely textured while the acidity seems to melt into the soft fruit core. Latour receives the "toleration" of keeping "Château" in front of the appellation name. INAO has been cracking down elsewhere on all sorts of matters seemingly simple like this, but I do hope Latour gets to keep this name given its heritage at the property as it was the great-grandfather of Fabrice Latour who purchased the vines after the phylloxera crisis. 2023-32

2020 Corton Clos de la Vigne au Saint GC

Situated near the bottom of the hill and on the right as one arrives from Aloxe, this is a powerful, even forceful, Corton. It is concentrated with vigorous savory spice and pure blackberry flavors. The mid-palate sappiness is very moreish and nicely held together with streamlined but dense tannins and a strong spine of acidity. Only Louis Latour and Méo-Camuzet make this wine now. 2024-34

2020 Chambertin GC Cuvée Héritiers Latour

Seven parcels combine to make this wine, spread across the top and bottom of Chambertin. Bramble, forest floor, fireplace cinders and oak spice scent the nose and palate. The 100% new oak dominates the fruit until it has the chance to shine on the ripe, lingering finish. There's some light tannic tug and nicely vibrant acidity to assure many years ahead. 2024-35
